PRESS RELEASE

Date: November 24, 2008

Dr. Aldorigo Scopino of the Capt. Nathan Hale Middle School in Coventry was recently awarded the Central Connecticut State University 2008-2009 Excellence in Teaching Award. At ceremonies held on the New Britain campus on November 7, Dr. Scopino was honored by CCSU President Jack Miller. Mr. Miller acknowledged the many educators on the CCSU faculty that were named as Excellence in Teaching finalists and semi-finalists along with a Teaching Honor Roll. The selection of honorees was based on a comprehensive process with nominations coming from the campus community at large. Full-time and part-time faculty members were eligible for the award which is given for inspired teaching, promoting extraordinary learning.

Dr. Scopino has been a teacher at the Capt. Nathan Hale Middle School for the past thirty years, and an Adjunct Professor of History at CCSU for the past twenty years. Dr. Scopino holds a Master's Degree from Brown University and a Ph.D. from the University of Connecticut in history, and has written many articles and reviews for professional journals.
