

Student of the Quarter

For

Outstanding Citizenship

6th Grade:

Brianna Martin

While there are many students that are deserving of being nominated, Bri (Brianna) Martin especially rises above the others as the first nomination for 6th grade science student of the quarter. Bri is a kind, helpful, and respectful student. Bri had demonstrated the characteristics of being a good citizen in daily life by working well with other students and helping them to do their very best at all times.

Erin Mairson

Erin was selected because of her overwhelmingly positive attitude. Erin is always striving to do her best in school, but she goes above and beyond when it comes to helping others. Erin volunteers herself any time teachers or students needs assistance with work. This is a quality we should all work on more consistently!

Maggie Ziko

Maggie is an excellent role model who does whatever is needed. Specifically she works well one-on-one with a special needs student.

Lakota Potter

Lakota is always ready to lend a helping hand to others such as being quick to offer a pencil to someone in need. He demonstrates mature compassionate insight and often speaks up on behalf of classmates who might need support. Lakota is happy to be participating in the Friends of Rachel Club.

Ethan Valdes

Ethan is a kind person to his classmates. I have witnessed this on several occasions. Here is just one example, my first period classes need to get chairs from stacks around the room. Ethan sits on the outside of a row. As a student approached after he had gotten his chair first, he took his chair slid it down the row and just stepped back without words, smiles were exchanged. I have observed other acts of his kindness with students. He is also respectful and teachers and adults in our building. I believe that Ethan Valdes is an excellent role-model to the Captain Nathan Hale School Community.

7th Grade:

Emily Kennedy

Emily has clearly demonstrated the qualities of a great citizen at CNHMS and in the wider community. In the classroom, she acts as a role model for fellow students in regards to her behavior and her participation. She is an enthusiastic, creative, and involved student, and willing to take learning risks. Emily works well with everyone, being a kind partner and also a person who tends to draw out the best in those with whom she works. Whenever her teachers and her classmates need extra assistance, Emily is willing to help without question. She also shares her positive qualities with the wider world, being involved with many activities that better the local community.

Nina Yilmaz

Nina is one of those people who is friends with anyone and is judgmental towards no one. She marches to the beat of her own drum, and in doing so doesn't fall into the pressures of bullying. Nina is great for a smile and a friendly "hi" to staff and students. I have seen her help someone pick up dropped books in the hallway multiple times. She helped me guide 6th graders to their next class at the beginning of the year. She would not like anyone to know it, but she also put up the inspirational notes on the locker. She just wants to create an atmosphere of respect and kindness in our school, which I admire. Not many middle school students wish to step up into that type of role. This is why the math team is nominating Nina.

Megan Hurley

Megan is always thinking ahead and going above and beyond what is required of her. She is a great role model and has exhibited excellent community service outside of school

Luke Terrence

Luke has been selected for this award because he demonstrates the characteristics of a good citizen in his daily life as evidenced by his classroom behavior. Luke is a good role model for his fellow students. Whenever group work is on the agenda Luke takes a leadership role and will not only help his classmates if they are struggling but will also try to keep the group on task. I can say I have rarely seen such adult behavior and adherence to his personal expectations as I have seen in Luke. He can always be counted on to be paying attention and have the answer during a discussion and will always try & be helpful to me whether it be by passing out work or taking on a leadership role with his classmates.

Leah Sattar

The teachers in LA and Reading would like to nominate Leah Sattar. Not only is Leah a conscientious student, she is a role model to others in her grade level. She is involved in both the Jazz Band and Friends of Rachel Club to name a few activities. Leah is always willing to help others. For all these reasons and more, we think Leah would make an excellent Student of the Quarter.

8th Grade:

Jake Michaels

On several occasions Jake has gone out of his way to help another student who was struggling with class work. He has a genuine and kind demeanor amongst his peers. I have even seen him redirect a friend who may have fallen off task on his own accord. He is a great student who exemplifies citizenship in and out of the classroom.

Mikala Cavin

Mikala is always prepared for our class, her behavior is beyond reproach, and she contributes a sense of positive energy to a challenging class. She has been observed as helping others with difficult tasks without our asking as well. Nice job Mikala!

Peter Thompson

Peter is an enthusiastic learner! Besides being a diligent student, Peter is an excellent role model for his peers. He is respectful to teachers and classmates. Peter listens to others in cooperative groups and enjoys helping other students improve in writing. Always an active participant in classroom activities, he helps create a positive learning environment in our classrooms.

Jeremie Belekewicz

Jeremie is a good role model for his peers. He regularly does the right thing, even when those around him are not! Thank you Jeremie.

Kevin Huppert

Kevin is an excellent role model for his 8th grade peers. He exhibits responsible behavior in class, completes his own work to the best of his ability. He is respectful and kind to his teachers and to his classmates. I believe that Kevin would advocate for good choices in a situation requiring good judgment and decision-making.
